As a person grows older, an acid pH leads to the progression of most, if not all, degenerative diseases. Additionally, as we age, our chemical and physiological pH balancing mechanisms become increasingly inefficient, and, compounded by our acid-forming diets, we develop an overall acidic pH profile. Proper cellular pH is of vital importance to someone who is fighting a disease, overcoming an illness, or someone desiring to simply feel better and remain as young as possible. By preventing this continuous accumulation of acidic waste in your bodies, we can in fact help to reverse the aging process.

The single most important health measurement is the pH level in your blood.

As more and more acid is accumulated, the body slowly begins to drown in its own poisonous acid. Generally going unnoticed for years, these destructive wastes begin to silently corrode and eat away at your veins and arteries, destroying cells, and ultimately, entire organ function in your body. Without correcting your body pH, the damage becomes aggressively worse, even deadly.

An acid pH can cause such problems as:

- Clogged Arteries, weakened Veins and Heart Tissue
- Accelerated Free Radical Damage
- Accelerated Premature Aging
- Uncontrollable Weight/Fat Gain, Diabetes and Obesity
- Chronic fatigue, Acid Indigestion, Flatulence
- Frequent headaches, sinusitis, constipation,
- Increased Stress, Higher Blood Pressure
- Cold hands and feet
- Immune deficiency, slow wound healing
- Reduced Oxygen transport to the cells
